Thursday 14 October 2.00 to 4.00pm

The intention of this participatory CTCHC webinar is to consider exciting research (which will be launched at this event) on the key issue of Meanwhile Use by Jude Sherry and Dr Frank O'Connor of Anois (<https://www.anois.org/>) and to compare that with experience from Scotland, as presented by Diarmaid Lawlor from the Scottish Futures Trust (<https://www.scottishfuturestrust.org.uk/>). We will also be hearing a developer perspective from Rob Cass, a real estate developer with extensive international experience of community-led urban regeneration.

There will be plenty of time for questions and to draw conclusions re what needs to happen next in Ireland.

The CTCHC is an innovative, trans-disciplinary programme created by the Heritage Council, in conjunction with participating towns across the country, third-level institutes, the business and cultural sector, a variety of governmental departments and professional bodies. It links closely with the planning system, including County Development Plans and Local Area Plans, to deliver results on the ground across Ireland. (See : <https://www.heritagecouncil.ie/projects/town-centre-health-check-programme> for more information)

A Zoom link for the webinar will be supplied to all who register.
